NSS Special Camp Day-1 to Day-07 Report
Academic Year 2024-25

Starting day of NSS camp

The 7-day National Service Scheme (NSS) Special Camp was successfully conducted at Rasegaon village, Taluka Dindori, District Nashik, from 7th January 2025 to 13th January 2025 under the guidance of Savitribai Phule Pune University and organized by Shri Sadashiv Dhamankar College.

The camp aimed to develop social responsibility, leadership, and community engagement among NSS volunteers. The camp commenced with an inaugural function in the presence of esteemed guests including Dr. Sanjay Wakhare, Principal, and NSS Programme Officer Mr. Rahul Gaikwad. Village representatives, including Sarpanch Mrs. Manda Bendkule and Deputy Sarpanch Mr. Sudhakar Waghule, extended their support and encouraged the volunteers. During the camp, various community-oriented activities were carried out. Cleanliness drives were organized to promote hygiene and sanitation, where volunteers cleaned village roads, public places, and school premises.

Health awareness programs were conducted to educate villagers about hygiene, nutrition, and disease prevention. A health check-up camp also benefited the local community. The volunteers conducted village surveys to understand local issues and organized awareness rallies on digital literacy, women empowerment, environmental protection, and education. Special focus was given to digital literacy under the theme "Youth for Digital Literacy, Youth for My India," helping villagers understand online services and digital tools. Environmental activities such as tree plantation were also undertaken to promote sustainability.

In the evenings, cultural programs including street plays and songs were performed to spread social messages and strengthen community bonding.

Camp objective -Tree Plantation and Tree Conservation

Report on NSS Camp – Day 1

The first day of the National Service Scheme (NSS) camp began with great enthusiasm and a sense of responsibility among all the volunteers. The main objective of the day was Tree Plantation and Tree Conservation, which is a crucial step towards environmental protection and sustainable development. The program aimed to spread awareness about the importance of trees and encourage everyone to contribute towards a greener future.

The day started early in the morning with the gathering of all NSS volunteers at the camp site. The program commenced with a short inauguration ceremony, where the NSS coordinator addressed the volunteers and explained the importance of tree plantation. The speech highlighted how trees play a vital role in maintaining ecological balance, providing oxygen, reducing pollution, conserving water, and supporting wildlife.

After the introduction, the volunteers were divided into small groups and assigned different areas for plantation. Before starting the activity, a brief demonstration was given on how to properly plant a sapling and take care of it. Volunteers were guided about digging pits, placing the saplings correctly, watering them, and ensuring their protection from damage.

The tree plantation activity was carried out with great energy and teamwork. Various types of saplings such as neem, banyan, mango, and other local species were planted. Each volunteer actively participated, showing dedication and commitment to the cause. The surroundings of the camp area, nearby roads, and open spaces were chosen for plantation to maximize the environmental impact.

NSS Camp Report – Day 2

Objective of the Camp: Village cleanliness and child marriage awareness

The second day of the NSS (National Service Scheme) camp was conducted with great enthusiasm and dedication by all the volunteers. The main objectives of the day were village cleanliness and awareness about child marriage. The activities were carefully planned to promote social responsibility and bring positive change in the community.

The day began early in the morning with a short assembly where volunteers gathered and were briefed about the schedule and importance of the day's activities. The NSS Program Officer motivated the students by explaining how cleanliness and social awareness contribute to the overall development of a village. After the briefing, the volunteers were divided into groups to carry out different tasks efficiently.

The first activity was the village cleanliness drive. Volunteers actively participated in cleaning the streets, public places, and surrounding areas of the village. They collected waste materials such as plastic, paper, and other garbage, and disposed of them properly. The students also encouraged villagers to maintain cleanliness and explained the importance of hygiene for a healthy life.

NSS Camp Report – Day 3

Objective of the camp: Population Control and Anemia Awareness

The third day of the NSS camp was successfully conducted with a focus on two important social and health issues: population control and anemia awareness. The day began with a morning assembly where volunteers gathered and were briefed about the objectives and planned activities. The program aimed to educate villagers about the importance of family planning and to spread awareness regarding the causes, prevention, and treatment of anemia, especially among women and children.

The NSS volunteers were divided into groups to ensure effective execution of the activities. The first session of the day focused on population control. Volunteers visited different households in the village and interacted with families to explain the importance of maintaining a balanced family size. They highlighted how overpopulation can lead to problems such as poverty, unemployment, lack of education, and insufficient healthcare. The concept of family planning was explained in a simple and understandable manner. Information about various contraceptive methods and government schemes was also shared with the villagers to encourage responsible decision-making.

Later in the day, a small awareness rally was organized in the village. Volunteers carried posters and slogans related to population control, such as “Small Family, Happy Family” and “Think Before You Expand Your Family.” The rally attracted the attention of the villagers and helped in spreading the message more effectively.

NSS Camp Report – Day 4

Objective of the camp: Awareness on Use of Government Schemes and Government Apps

The fourth day of the NSS camp was dedicated to creating awareness about various government schemes and promoting the effective use of government mobile applications among villagers. The main objective of the day was to educate people about the benefits provided by the government and how digital platforms can make these services easily accessible.

The day began with a morning assembly, followed by a briefing by the NSS Program Officer about the importance of government welfare schemes in improving the quality of life of citizens. Volunteers were divided into groups and assigned different areas in the village to conduct surveys and spread awareness.

The NSS volunteers organized door-to-door visits to interact directly with villagers. During these visits, they explained various important schemes related to health, education, employment, agriculture, and financial inclusion. Special emphasis was given to schemes such as health insurance, pension plans, and subsidies available for farmers and small businesses. Many villagers were unaware of these benefits, and the volunteers guided them on how to apply and avail these services.

In addition to schemes, the volunteers also demonstrated the use of government mobile applications. They helped villagers understand how to download and use apps for services such as digital payments, accessing documents, booking appointments, and checking scheme eligibility. Practical demonstrations were conducted using smartphones, making it easier for villagers to learn.

Objective of the camp: New Voter Registration and Awareness

The fifth day of the NSS camp was dedicated to spreading awareness about the importance of voting and encouraging new voter registration among eligible citizens. The day began with a morning assembly where the NSS volunteers were briefed about the significance of democratic participation and the role of youth in strengthening the nation through voting.

The primary objective of the day was to educate people, especially young individuals who had recently turned 18, about their voting rights and responsibilities. Volunteers were divided into groups and assigned different areas of the village to conduct door-to-door campaigns. They interacted with villagers and explained the importance of voting in a democracy. Special emphasis was given to first-time voters, motivating them to register and actively participate in elections.

The volunteers carried informative pamphlets and forms required for voter registration. They guided eligible citizens on how to fill out the registration forms and informed them about necessary documents such as identity proof, age proof, and address proof. Many villagers were unaware of the online registration process, so volunteers also demonstrated how to register using mobile apps and government websites.

Overall, the fifth day of the NSS camp was successful in promoting voter awareness and encouraging new registrations. The activities conducted not only helped villagers understand their democratic rights but also empowered the volunteers with a sense of responsibility towards society. The initiative was a step forward in building an informed and active citizenry, contributing to a stronger and more inclusive democracy.

NSS Camp Day 6 Report

Objective of the camp: Creating Septic Tanks and Drainage Ditches

The sixth day of the NSS camp was dedicated to improving sanitation facilities in the village through the construction of septic tanks and drainage ditches. The main objective of this activity was to promote hygiene, prevent water stagnation, and reduce the spread of diseases caused by poor sanitation.

The day began early in the morning with a briefing session conducted by the camp coordinator. Volunteers were informed about the importance of proper waste management and drainage systems in rural areas. The technical aspects of constructing septic tanks and digging drainage ditches were explained with the help of local experts and supervisors.

Safety instructions were also given to ensure that all volunteers carried out the work efficiently and without any risk.

After the briefing, the volunteers were divided into groups and assigned specific tasks. One group focused on digging pits for septic tanks, while another group worked on creating drainage channels to allow wastewater to flow smoothly away from residential areas. The work required teamwork, physical effort, and careful planning to ensure proper alignment and depth of the ditches.

Volunteers actively participated in digging, leveling, and clearing debris. The septic tank pits were prepared according to the recommended dimensions, ensuring that they would function effectively for waste disposal. Meanwhile, the drainage ditches were designed to connect households with a proper outlet, preventing water accumulation and maintaining cleanliness in the surroundings.

the sixth day of the NSS camp was highly productive and meaningful. The construction of septic tanks and drainage ditches not only improved the sanitation infrastructure of the village but also raised awareness about hygiene and health.

NSS Camp Report – Day 7

Objective of the camp: Creating a Plastic-Free Village

The seventh day of the NSS camp was dedicated to the important and timely objective of creating a plastic-free village. The day began with enthusiasm and a strong sense of responsibility among all the volunteers. The program aimed to spread awareness about the harmful effects of plastic on the environment and human health, and to encourage villagers to adopt eco-friendly alternatives.

The day started with a morning assembly where the NSS volunteers were briefed about the plan of action. The camp coordinator explained the importance of reducing plastic usage and highlighted how plastic pollution affects soil, water, animals, and overall village cleanliness. After the briefing, the volunteers were divided into groups and assigned different areas of the village for awareness and cleaning activities.

The first activity of the day was a cleanliness drive. Volunteers collected plastic waste such as polythene bags, bottles, wrappers, and other non-biodegradable materials from streets, fields, and public places. The collected waste was segregated properly, and efforts were made to dispose of it responsibly. This activity not only helped in cleaning the village but also set an example for the villagers.

Following the cleanliness drive, the volunteers conducted door-to-door awareness campaigns. They interacted with villagers and explained the harmful effects of plastic, including soil pollution, water blockage, and risks to animals that accidentally consume plastic. The volunteers encouraged people to reduce the use of single-use plastics and switch to cloth bags, paper bags, and reusable containers. Demonstrations were also given on how to make simple cloth bags at home.

In addition to this, a small rally was organized in the village with slogans like “Say No to Plastic” and “Save Environment, Save Future.”

Overall, the seventh day of the NSS camp was highly successful and impactful.

The 7-day NSS camp was a valuable and memorable experience. Each day focused on different activities like tree plantation, cleanliness, health awareness, government schemes, voter awareness, sanitation work, and creating a plastic-free village.

The camp helped us learn teamwork, discipline, and social responsibility. It also created awareness among villagers and brought positive change. Overall, it was a successful and meaningful experience.
